

Dr. Mohamed Y. Mattar is a Research Professor of Law and Executive Director of The Protection Project at The Johns Hopkins University, School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS). His professional expertise is in comparative and international law, especially international human rights and trafficking in persons. For over ten years, Mohamed Mattar has worked in more than 50 countries to promote state compliance with international human rights standards and has advised governments on drafting and implementing anti-trafficking legislation. He testified in the United States before the House Committee on International Relations, the House Committee on Government Reform, and the Senate Committee on the Judiciary. He also testified before the Russian Duma and the Mexican Senate to advocate for the passage of legislation and its effective implementation. He has served as a member of various United Nations expert groups focusing on trafficking in persons. He participated in drafting the United Nations model law on trafficking in persons and he wrote the Inter-Parliamentary Handbook on the appropriate responses to the problem of trafficking in persons. He teaches courses on international and comparative law including “International Human Rights: Theory and Practice”, “International Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children”, “Comparative Legal Systems”, “Islamic Law”, “Introduction to American Law”, and “International Contract Law”. His latest publications include “Comparative Models of Human Rights Monitoring and Reporting Mechanisms”, 41 Vanderbilt Transnational Law Journal, 1355 (2008), “Unresolved Questions in the Bill of Rights of the New Iraqi Constitution: How Will the Clash between ‘Human Rights’ and ‘Islamic Law’ Be Reconciled in Future Legislative Enactments and Judicial Interpretations?”, 30 Fordham International Law Journal, 126 (2007), and “Incorporating the Five Basic Elements of a Model Anti-trafficking in Persons Legislation in Domestic Laws: From the United Nations Protocol to the European Convention”, 14 Tulane Journal of International and Comparative Law, 357 (2006). Mohamed Mattar received his Doctor of Juridical Sciences (S.J.D.) and Master of Laws (LL.M) from Tulane University, his Master of Comparative Law (M.C.L.) from the University of Miami, and his License en Droit (LL.B.) from Alexandria University.